Why we say “Vote Labour”

There have been modest gains since Labour was elected in 1997, such as increased spending on the NHS and education, the peace process in Ireland, devolution in Scotland and Wales, the restoration of local power in the Greater London Authority, pensioner winter fuel payments raised from £10 to £250 and extension of the use of bus passes.

Anti-union laws have not been repealed and the railways remain privatised but workers, through the trade union movement, enjoy greater influence under a Labour government and can now force bosses to recognise unions. These small victories would not have happened under the Tories.

This is why the New Worker, the paper of the New Communist party, is calling for workers to vote Labour in the general and local elections.

We support Labour even though we oppose New Labour’s wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and we do not believe Brown’s economic policies can solve capitalism’s ills.

Our call to vote Labour is based on the concrete conditions in Britain today. A Labour government with its yet unbroken links with the Labour Party, the trade unions and the co-operative movement offers the best option for the working class in the era of parliamentary democracy.

The Conservative Party is the party of the wealthy. Its natural allies are big business, finance and big landowners and it is fundamentally hostile towards organised labour.

The fight for socialism

To permanently organise society for the benefit of working people can only happen through a socialist revolution that puts the working class in power. That can never happen through bourgeois elections.

The New Worker fights for socialism because it is the only way to end exploitation, unemployment, poverty, economic crisis and war. Socialism is the only answer to climate change and pollution.

But that doesn’t mean turning our backs on the immediate demands for social justice and state welfare put forward by the labour movement representing millions in the Labour Party and the trade unions – that would mean isolation from the working class.

At the same time we oppose the class collaborationist ideas of social democracy where financiers are courted and trade union leaders ignored.

We work for working class unity to strengthen the left and progressive forces within the Labour Party and the unions to create a democratic Labour Party that, when in office, will carry out the demands of the labour movement.

Such a left-social democratic government could bring about social reforms comparable to the creation of the “Welfare State” after 1945. This could be paid for by taxing the rich and scrapping Britain’s weapons of mass destruction. But only Labour, with its organic links to the working class, could bring this about.

The “Left” alternatives

The various parties offering an “alternative left” instead of Labour and standing candidates in general and local elections are actually dividing the labour movement and the working class. In the current electoral system, voting for the “alternative left” parties, tactical voting or abstaining, effectively means a wasted vote and ultimately benefits the Conservatives. A Conservative government, with or without support from the Liberal Democrats, will always be much worse than any Labour government.

The reality is that these “alternative left” parties are rejected time and again by the same working class their programmes claim to advance. There isn’t even a remote possibility of any of them taking office as the rhetoric and wild promises of these parties do not reflect reality.

The New Worker works with the working class as it really exists—a class that sees the Labour Party and the trade unions as representing its interests.

So the choice is: Conservative or Labour, regardless of unpalatable Labour policies. And if Labour is to win then every vote needs to be brought out.

A Labour government is the best possible outcome for the working class right now and the best way of taking forward the fight for socialism.
Fighting for public sector pensions

THE PUBLIC sector union Unison last week hit back angrily at CBI scaremongering, after they claimed that public sector pensions have created a “black hole” in Government finances.

The union called on the CBI to focus on the private companies, that, despite making profits are closing their pension schemes, forcing staff into poverty in their retirement.

Unison general secretary Dave Prentis, said: “The CBI’s talk of a pensions ‘black hole’ is alarmist and wrong. There is no pensions D-Day on the horizon, every public sector worker will not retire on the same day and claim their pension.

“Public sector pensions schemes have already been through a comprehensive review. They are affordable and sustainable in the long term. The retirement age for most public sector worker is already 65, and far from being gold plated, the average woman working in local government can expect just £2,600 a year, or £40 a week when they retire.

“The Swedish model it draws on is not the answer. Inequalities and extremes of pay are far greater in Britain than Sweden. And giving retired workers a lump sum, leaves them vulnerable to pensions miss-selling and disreputable pensions’ advisers, hungry for commission.

“Instead of attacking public sector pensions, the CBI needs to look in its own backyard. It should turn its firepower on the boardroom bosses who award themselves huge pensions, and low retirement ages, but close their schemes to staff.”

THE NEW COMMUNIST PARTY

Our Party was formed in 1977 following a struggle against revisionism inside the Communist Party of Great Britain, which finally dissolved in the 1990s.

The New Communist Party is a Marxist-Leninist party which is fighting for a world without exploitation. A world in which the will of the masses, the workers, the toilers, the people who work in the factories and farms, is carried out. A world in which those who produce the entire wealth of the globe get the fruits of their labour.

This is the world we work for. A socialist society where there are no slums, poverty or racism. A society where there are no classes, no exploiters, no bigotry and no war. A new and better world — the world Marx and Engels predicted and a world that will surely come to pass. It is already being built in the socialist countries of today. It is being fought for in every continent and every country.

We are part of that struggle!

This is the century of socialism!

Fighting for public sector pensions

4 weeks: £4; 3 months: £16; 6 months: £22; annual: £40

Name.................................................................
Address..............................................................
.................................................................
Post code............................................................
Phone...............................................................
Send cheque/P.O.’s, made out to New Worker, to:
NW Subs, PO Box 73, London SW11 2PQ

THE NEW WORKER
Weekly paper of the New Communist Party
Send for a FREE copy or SUBSCRIBE...

On the Web
New Worker national:
www.newworker.org
London District:
http://londoncommunists.blogspot.com